

To the FCC.

I don't see why it's such a problem that XM is offering local services on their service. Although they don't offer it in my area (Jacksonville Florida is the nearest metro area), I can see where it would be a viable resource to many who travel day and day to the metro area, from the metro area, or around it's major traffic areas.

We pay for the service. It's not a lot. Compared to the other satellite service (which isn't comparable in quality actually). It's worth it every bit. I would even pay extra to hear the local services, not too much extra; something like 5 or so dollars extra a month. And only when it would benefit other people. XM Has over 1 million subscribers making it the largest satellite radio provider in the world. I'm sure somewhere there are people who think that these local services are worth it and actually listen to them and use them.

Local services like weather I listen to but not their traffic.

Please don't pass this bill.

That's all I have to say.

Michael M Thomas
michael@mhsfriends.com
Middleburg, Florida